

T. E. SUBLETTE, Proprietor,

KIRKSVILLE, MISSOURI

FRIDAY, MAY 20, 1890.

—Some of our exchanges speak of Hon. F. M. Harrington as excellent congressional timber.

—There seems to be a difference of opinion among the members of the F. & L. U. in regard to putting a ticket in the field.

—Kirkville needs a better water supply, and the people are rapidly coming to the conclusion that one must be obtained in some manner. The water-works scheme is meeting with a very favorable reception.

—The president of the bi-metallic league in London cables that the Jones' silver bill would, if adopted, prove an effectual step toward the remonetization of silver all over the world.

—A Southern exchange says the only kind of land that will bear shipment to the warmer countries south of us without becoming oily and rancid, is the much persecuted "compound land." The cotton seed oil renders it firm and increases its keeping quality. The suppression of this article will be one blow at our much talked of Southern commerce.

—Half a million dollars is to be invested in the erection of a tin plate mill near Pittsburg, if the McKinley tariff bill passes. It will be one of the largest in the world. J. Davis Lewis, formerly a tin plate manufacturer in Wales, is at the head of the projected enterprise. Free sites, coupled with cash gifts running all the way up to $50,000, have been offered by rival localities to secure the new plant.

—The McKinley tariff bill passed the house last week by a strict party vote. What its fate in the Senate will be cannot be accurately predicted, but it is quite probable that it will also pass that body without any material change, by a party vote. The bill does not give universal satisfaction, and it is impossible to frame a tariff bill that would. Our interests are so diversified that any tariff measure would cause objection from some quarter. The bill has been shaped by an able committee, and has been thoroughly discussed in the House, and the Senate will hardly presume to alter it very greatly. The country desires an end of tariff changes and the passage of this bill will fix the rate of duties until after the next presidential election. If it is followed by the passage of a silver bill, the policy of the country will be fixed for a number of years to come, and business men can make their calculations upon a certain basis and a long period of prosperity will ensue. This will give the next Congress to the Republican party, and a victory in 1892.

Who is Geo. W. Rupe?

Ed. GRAPHIC:—The many friends of Mr. Geo. W. Rupe in Morrow township have insisted that he become a candidate for County Judge at Large. Knowing him as we do, we feel that this important office could not be placed in better or safer hands.

But the question, Who is George W. Rupe? may be asked by many of your readers. May we, who have known him intimately for twelve years, answer the question? Mr. Rupe, then a young man, came into this neighborhood twelve years ago with his ax on his shoulder. He at once obtained employment in the tie woods. His industry and quiet, gentlemanly disposition attracted attention. He saved his money and invested it carefully, and now owns one of the best farms on Spring Creek. He is recognized here and in Kirkville, as one of the best business men in the county, and enjoys the trust and confidence of all. Morrow township is proud of him, because he has hewn his way from the tie woods to his present position, and his work is an example of what can be accomplished in our country by energy, industry and honesty. We feel that Adair county could do no better than to honor him with the office for which he announces this week; and, if he is nominated and elected, there will never be cause for our people to regret their action.

MORROW TOWNSHIP.

Mr. McCall for Congress.

Ed. GRAPHIC:—I see that correspondents are having their say about candidates for Congress, and ask you to grant me a like privilege. We want a man who will make an able and thorough canvass, and give strength to the Republican party, wherever he addresses the people.

In Mr. J. M. McCall of your town, I think we have such a man. As our candidate for the State Senate he did well and his appointment as Supervisor of the Census will greatly strengthen him throughout the district. What do the GRAPHIC readers say to the above suggestion?

PETTIS REPUBLICAN.

Gopher Hill Union, No. 1251.

Gibbs, Mo., 24th, 1890.

Whereas a call has been made for a convention of delegates of the F. & L. U. in Adair county, to meet in Kirkville on the 5th day of June to nominate a county ticket. Be it resolved that we utterly condemn any movement to draw the F. & L. U. into politics in Adair county. And that we respectfully decline to send delegates to said convention. Resolved that we consider the said call unconstitutional and out of order. And that we request the several county papers to publish these resolutions.

Children's Day.

Clay Township, May 22, 1890.

Last Sunday, May 18th, being the day set apart by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South as Children's Day, Trinity Sunday School suspended the regular morning lesson, and devoted the time to exercises appropriate to the occasion. On Saturday the church was beautifully decorated with evergreens and flowers. The programme consisted of scripture reading and prayer, recitations, declamations, responsive reading, songs, and short talks by Rev. Browning, the pastor, and Mr. Flowers. An unusual interest was manifested, over forty children took part, and the church was crowded, despite the attraction Charitonward.

One important feature of the program not mentioned above was the collection for the relief of needy Sunday schools in this and foreign countries; amount collected was $4.37.

A few words are due the prime mover of this good work—Mr. A. T. Stewart, Supt. of Trinity Sunday School. Owing to his determined efforts, the school did not go into winter quarters, as usually happens in the country. He and a few faithful ones kept the work moving, and this spring, instead of having to resurrect a dead Sunday school, everything was alive, and the result is an increase in interest and in numbers.

Your correspondent made a visit to the terrible boiler explosion that recently occurred at Horace Miller's mill down near the lower iron bridge. It was terrible in the extreme. Debris was blown in every direction. The huge boiler parted near the front and one end was sent up through the tops of the trees and carried nearly one hundred yards, cutting its way through all obstructions.

The larger end was carried about fifty yards in the opposite direction tearing its way through a large pile of lumber and farther on breaking a large elm log squarely in two. Large stones were sent in every direction for about 50 yards. In fact everything is a total wreck. We learn that the boiler was old and considerably patched and has been considered unsafe. It is a great and terrible disaster.

MEG'S LUCK.

A STORY OF KIRKSVILLE.

Relating why a Plucky Girl was Lucky.

(Copyrighted by E. M. Clark, 1888)

When Meg mentioned bonnets and hats her uncle took the hint, and in a few minutes was introducing her to W. C. Browning. This establishment has, by the most exquisite taste, liberal dealing and well selected stock, firmly established itself as a leader. The gentlemen, excusing themselves, retired, leaving Meg to revel in realms of bliss over one of the most elegant stocks of millinery, west of Chicago, and if ever a feminine soul was delighted and satisfied in the bewitching array of stylish bonnets and hats, for all purposes, her's was straight way.

"Smoke" had been suggested by Charles, and this was the first opportunity. The fact was pretty well known that Plainfolks was escorting a wedding party, so that his significant winks were readily understood by the acquaintances they were bestowed on; by the time the pair reached J. B. Kronk & Co's popular cigar establishment, there was a goodly number of gentlemen to offer congratulations to the young bridegroom.

"Your best cigars," was his order, and the crowd was soon luxuriating in the famous brands that make Kronk & Co's name popular as a caterer to the devotees at the shrine of Nicotine. As a matter of fact, there are on the market no cigars superior to their "Our Dudes," "Our Secret," "Grand Opera," "Havana Straight," and "Just Out."

Meg was still engaged as they returned to her.

"It's all right, though," quoth Plainfolks. "It's all right. We'll indulge a little in personal decoration ourselves. You need a dress suit—a regulation swell Sunday-go-to-meetin' finish, you know, and very happily I can suit you as well as though you was in a big New York shop. We've really got one artistic tailor in this town; come down with me to C. Borneman."

Charles was indeed pleased to find that he could make selections for a full dress suit from as fine a stock of suitings as could be found in the eastern shops, and was soon convinced that Mr. Borneman was master of his art as a cutter. He lost no time in leaving his measure and order.

When they returned to Meg, the observant old man noted that her expressive face showed signs of fatigue. Straightway he suggested a resort to some place of refreshment, and announced that Kirkville boasted of an exquisitely fitted, and delightfully comfortable establishment. He escorted his charges to Sholly's Bee Hive. Here they regaled themselves on creams and ices, as "delicious as the nectarean dreams of the gods," so Meg declared, and found opportunity for further refreshments in a full compliment of all the leading summer drinks, delightfully prepared. Before leaving Meg was literally loaded down with packages of choice confections and native and foreign fruits, for the establishment deals extensively in these lines.

As the party was enjoying refreshments, Plainfolks indulged in a bit of philosophy. "One of the most important auxiliaries to a happy household," he said, "is a well supplied larder. The kitchen rules the house, young lady, for, as your table is, so will your husband's temper be. So you want to see to it that only the very best groceries and provisions enter your kitchen. I most solemnly recommend, too, that when you have a good thing, you stick to it. Your best plan, therefore, is, find an honest grocer, and when he is found, never leave him. I advise you to deal with Sigler Bros. You will always find them full stocked with every possible thing in the line of staple and fancy groceries, fresh and first class—no shelf-worn goods there—and in prices, they are way down to brass tacks.

"And while on this most important topic of gastronomy," continued the old man, "it doesn't follow that because a man must eat, he must confine himself to groceries and vegetables;—as a fundamental rule, he must eat meat. To locate the man who can supply you satisfactorily—who keeps choice and juicy meats, steak, fish, game, etc., just in the seasons when they will be most appreciated as delicacies, is quite an undertaking, but Hogan & Edmonson's meat market, is that place. They are cheap, well stocked, courteous and reliable, and combine quantity and quality for the money. The popular shop was visited, of course, and a pleasant chat indulged in. The young couple was well pleased with the neatness and completeness of the establishment, and will be profitable customers.

"Now," remarked Plainfolks, the party once more enroute, "as you are going to farming, you'll want a supply of substantial, durable, well made and handsome harness. Right up the street is the establishment of the boss horse-miller of this section, J. H. Kinnear. None but the most expert workmen in the trade are employed there, and only the very best of material is used, while the proprietor gives his personal supervision to every minute detail.

They carry an enormous stock at all times. Heavy and light, work and buggy, plain and fancy, single and double harness, no matter what, you'll always find it. They have everything else usually kept in a complete establishment—saddles, whips, fly nets, dusters, fancy lap robes, blankets, everything that a farmer or a gentleman horse-owner can possibly desire. As to prices, well, they can't be undersold."

Suddenly declared Meg, "I want a family bible, uncle, and a new album. Please show me where I may find a nice assortment to select from."

"We'll go to W. G. Fout's drug and book store," said Plainfolks. "They have the completest establishment in town, and you'll find a great many articles indispensable for your parlor as well as library, there. The old man's statement was verified; the order that girl made was almost limitless. Miscellaneous books, fancy stationery, bric-a-brac, pictures, blank books, house decorations, the latest novels, hammocks, perfumery, beautiful toilet sets, the spell was only broken for Meg, by a wicked illusion of Plainfolks to the possibility of a future purchase of school books.

"Hello!" suddenly said Charles, "there goes a Columbus buggy, I declare, I must have one—didn't know you could get them over here."

"Get 'em?" snorted Plainfolks. "I can show you, young man, an establishment in the implement and vehicle line that'll astonish you. Down to Kennedy & Link's, and, sure enough, Charles was astonished at the extent and comprehensiveness of the stock, and more than that, before he left, he had purchased, not only a "South Bend" wagon for farm work, but a phaeton for Meg, an easy-gear light wagon, and a full line of farm implements including a "Jno. Deere" planter, a "Jno. Deere" plow, "Golden Eagle" cultivator, "Standard" mower and "Excelsior" binder.

As the party walked up the street, the gentlemen god natur-ally railing at Meg about the extent of her wants, Plainfolks suddenly made a dive into a handsome store-room. "Here are Smith & Dunkin," he said, "and I know they've got something you ought to have. You doubtless think," he continued, "that there's no use in knowing a druggist; that you have an eternal lease on good health; but let me caution you. Sometime you may need a prescription, and will want it compounded accurately and expeditiously. Messrs Smith & Dunkin are thorough pharmacists, employ none but competent assistants, and carry only the freshest and purest of drugs and medicines."

Meg now expressed a desire to visit a boot and shoe store, so Plainfolks escorted the party to Doneghy's Boot and Shoe store. They were satisfied. Before the girl left the store, an order covering the range of everything in the line of foot wear, from a lovely satin slipper, to a superb walking boot, had fallen from her lips. Charles, too, having been prompted by Plainfolks' suggestion, that if he wanted something away up—No. 1, with a polish on it, this was the place to secure it, had invested in an outfit ranging from gent's finest shoe, to a stout farm boot, including rubber goods.

No woman—or male either, for that matter,—can resist the styles and prices at Doneghy's."

While the young folks were thus engaged, Plainfolks was observed to examine his bank book with some concern. "By George!" he exclaimed, "my balance isn't going to carry me through." I believe I'll run down and see William T. Porter and negotiate for a loan."

School Commissioner's Report.

District 4—61—13 and 14 known as the Prairie Bird, this district lies south of Rural Dell. Bear Creek forms the boundary line from the northwest corner to the southeast, making it a triangle, valuation $32,268, school property valued at $400. The house is a very good frame, but needs repairing, painting and plastering. The plastering had dropped from several places on the ceiling; it is dangerous. The room is furnished with new improved seats but no maps, charts or globe; seating capacity, 48; this house is too small for the district as the enrollment was 52; average attendance 38; per cent of attendance 73. The grounds are high and rolling; they are beautiful grounds but need a few shade trees to ornament them and make them desirable for the children during the summer months of school. The school was in charge of Mr. A. D. Starr. Mr. S. seemed to be an earnest worker, busy at all times; we were well pleased with the manner in which he conducted his recitations. The interest of the school was good, order excellent.

District 6-63-14 known as Bullion school; this district lies south of Fair View and north of Rural Dell, and was formed from a part of the above district, it contains six square miles of beautiful country, valuation $39,338; value of school property $700; teachers wages last year $35; present wages $35; the house is located immediately south of the village, and is large and commodious. It is furnished with good improved seats, but the seats have been badly treated; the seating capacity is 64; this school is furnished with good charts but no maps or globe; the blackboard needs repairing; the grounds are very beautiful. The school is in the care of Miss Ada B. Keller, of Brashear. Miss K. is a model teacher, her room was neat and clean and desk neatly arranged. It would be useless to offer any comments on Miss K's teaching; the board has employed her for the second term. This is a practical recommendation; it expresses more than words.
